GROUNDWATER QUALITY CONTROL Rule Set 2022-39 EQ

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING THURSDAY, MARCH, 2, 2023 2:00 - 3:00 p.m.

In Person: Lee Walker, Atrium Level, North Tower, Constitution Hall 525 W Allegan Street, Lansing, M1 48933 Virtual: https://bit.ly/3Cy1DBF To join by phone: 213-787-0529, Conference Code 881478

The Department of Environment, Great Lakes, and Energy (EGLE), will hold a public hearing to receive public comments on proposed changes to the Groundwater Quality Control rule set.

The proposed rule set (2022-39 EQ) will amend the current rules to allow for the use of Portland-Limestone Cement Type IL. (Type IL.). The current rules adopt ASTM International Specification C 150-89 "Standard Specification for Portland Cement" (C 150-89) and require the use of Portland Cement that meets the requirements of this specification as an approved water supply system component. Up until 2022, the monufacturers of Portland Cement made the most common product (Type I) that is compliant with the specification. To reduce their corbon footprint, the manufacturers have modified the product and it no longer complies with C 150-89. The modified product, which is similar in characteristics, is referred to as Type IL. Modification of the language to allow the use of the Type IL would alleviate the need to use less common currently approved products and use a more sustainable product that has similar characteristics to Type I for safe water supply well construction.

These rules are promulgated by authority conferred on the director of EGLE by section 12714 of the Public Health Code, 1978 PA 368, as amended, MCL 333.12714 and Executive Reorganization Order Nos. 1996-1, 2011-1, and 2019-1, MCL 330.3101, 324.99921, and 224.99923.

The proposed rules will take immediate effect upon filing with the Secretary of Stote.

The proposed rules (2022-39 EG) are published on the Michigan Office of Administrative Hearings and Rules' Web site at Michigan.gov/ARD and in the February 15, 2023 issue of the Michigan Register. Copies of these proposed rules may also be obtained by mail or electronic mail at the following email address; devounad@Michigan.gov.

Comments on these proposed rules may be made at the hearing, by mail, or by electronic mail at the following addresses until March 2, 2023 at 5:00 p.m.:

Lighthouse Connections Academy (LCA) has scheduled a special meeting on January 30, 2023, at 2:30 pm for the purpose of conducting a public hearing surrounding LCA's application and request for a Labor Day waiver from the Michigan Department of Education.

LCA has applied to the Michigan Department of Education for a waiver, which would, if granted, allow LCA to begin the 2023-2024, 2024-2025, and 2025-2026 school years before Labor Day. If granted, the waiver would allow but not require the school to begin before Labor Day. If the waiver is not granted, the school would, by law, be required to start the school year after Labor Day.

The meeting, which will be attended (remotely) by a representative of the Michigan Department of Education, will include a review of the legislative requirement and purpose for the public hearing; a brief presentation on the requested waiver; a description of what student outcomes are expected if the waiver were to be granted; and a description of how the student outcomes will be measured by the school districts.

Members of the public will have the opportunity to provide comment on the proposed waiver application during the public hearing portion of the meeting. The meeting is scheduled for 2:30 pm on Monday, January 30, 2023, at Lighthouse Connections Academy, 3150 Livernois Road, Suite 201, Troy, MI 48083.

Good Advice

Dear Annie

Confronting a loved one who has an eating disorder should be done privately

ear Annie: My husband confided to me that his mother had an eating disorder in the past, and there are possible signs she may have relapsed. When she visits us, she will exercise for hours daily, regularly disparage her physical appearance and skip meals claiming that she is "too bloated to eat.

I'm never sure what is the best way to respond to her self-criticism or behaviors. My husband states that she saw a therapist years ago for this problem but has not received any treatment since. He thinks she would be resistant to any further treatment, but I can't

Recent visits with my in-laws have grown more tense, with my husband getting angry at me for buying too much food and "tempting" his mother to binge eat.

I've noticed that my husband and his side of the family will also significantly restrict their food intake whenever they're dining with my mother-in-law, possibly to accommodate her worries about overeating or out of habit.

I'm not sure what is the best way to handle this situation, both to reduce conflict between my husband and me when his family visits and to support my mother-in-law.

Would it be best to let them do all the grocery shopping, meal planning and cooking for themselves?

I'm not accustomed to having my house guests take care of themselves, inadvertently make the problem worse either. I would appreciate your thoughts. – Concerned Daughter-in-law

Dear Concerned DIL: You are doing a good thing by looking out for your mother-in-law. I'm sure your husband and his side of the family are well-intentioned, but it sounds like they are inadvertently enabling their mother's behavior, which will only make her eating disorder

According to the National Eating Disorders Association: "Family and friends can play an important role in identifying worrying symptoms ... Many individuals now in recovery from an eating disorder say the support of family and friends was crucial to them getting well."

NEDA suggests confronting your loved one in private and using only "I statements" - for example, "I noticed that you haven't been eating a lot recently, and I am concerned that you aren't getting enough food.

Let her know you are coming from a place of love, and prepare yourself for denial, resistance or Finally, offer to help find a physician or therapist who can help. Contacting the NEDA hotline at (800)-931-2237 is a good place to start.

Before you take this step, however, I recommend having a conversation with your husband.

Voice your concerns, and come prepared with research on eating disorders and their consequences. Once he realizes what is at stake, he will likely be more inclined to intervene. And seeing as it's his mother, you will want him on your side.

> GROUNDWATER QUALITY CONTROL Rule Set 2022-39 EQ

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING THURSDAY, MARCH, 2, 2023

2:00 - 3:00 p.m.

In Person: Lee Walker, Atrium Level, North Tower, Constitution Hall 525 W Allegan Street, Lansing, MI 48933 To join by phone: 213-787-0529, Conference Code 881478

The Department of Environment, Great Lakes, and Energy (EGLE), will hold a public hearing to receive public comments on proposed changes to the Groundwater Quality Control rule set

The proposed rule set (2022-39 EQ) will amend the current rules to allow for the use of Portland-Limestone Cement Type IL (Type IL). The current rules adopt ASTM International Specification C 150-89 "Standard Specification for Portland Cement" (C 150-89) and require the use of Portland Cement that meets the requirements of this specification as an approved water supply system component. Up until 2022, the manufacturers of Portland Cement made the most common product (Type I) that is compliant with the specification. To reduce their carbon footprint, the manufacturers have modified the product and it no longer complies with C 150-89. The modified product, which is similar in characteristics, is referred to as Type IL. Modification of the language to allow the use of the Type IL would alleviate the need to use less common currently approved products and use a more sustainable product that has similar characteristics to Type I for safe water supply well construction.

These rules are promulgated by authority conferred on the director of EGLE by section 12714 of the Public Health Code, 1978 PA 368, as amended, MCL 333.12714 and Executive Reorganization Order Nos. 1996-1, 2011-1, and 2019-1, MCL 330.3101, 324.99921, and 324.99923.

The proposed rules will take immediate effect upon filing with the Secretary of State

The proposed rules (2022-39 EG) are published on the Michigan Office of Administrative Hearings and Rules' Web site at Michigan.gov/ARD and in the February 15, 2023 issue of the Michigan Register. Copies of these proposed rules may also be obtained by mail or electronic mail at the following email address: deyoungd@Michigan.gov.

Comments on these proposed rules may be made at the hearing, by mail, or by electronic mail at the following addresses until March 2, 2023 at 5:00 p.m.:

Why the U.S. flipped on sending tanks to Ukraine

By Tara Copp and Lolita Baldor

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON » For months, U.S. officials balked at sending M1 Abrams tanks to Ukraine, insisting they were too complicated and too hard to maintain and repair. On Wednesday, that abruptly changed. Ukraine's desperate pleas for tanks were answered with a sweeping, trans-Atlantic yes. A look at the massive battle weapon, why it is important to Ukraine's war with Russia, and what drove the Biden administration's tank turnabout.

What are the Abrams?

M1 Abrams tanks have led American battle assaults for decades. Carrying a crew of four, the Abrams was first deployed to war in 1991. It has thick armor, a 120 mm main gun, armor piercing capabilities, advanced targeting systems, thick tracked wheels and a 1,500-horsepower turbine engine with a top speed of about 42 miles per hour.

Crews interviewed in a 1992 Government Accountability Office review after the Persian Gulf War praised its high survivability and said "several M1A1 crews reported receiving direct frontal hits from Iraqi T-72s with minimal damage." The Abrams' powerful jet engine can propel the tank through almost any terrain, whether heavy snow or heavy mud, said Kevin Butler, a former Army lieutenant who served as an Abrams tank platoon leader. Butler recalled a muddy exercise in the late 1990s at Fort Stewart, Georgia, where he'd voiced concern about the tanks getting stuck because it had already stuck the Humvees.

The Abrams, he said, "didn't even notice" the mud.

Why the U.S. kept saying no

The Abrams' jet engine needs hundreds of gallons of fuel to operate. It will burn through fuel at a rate of at least two gallons per mile whether the tank is moving or idling, Butler said, which means a constant supply convoy of fuel trucks must stay within reach so it can keep moving forward.

The U.S. worried that the fuel demands would create a logistical nightmare for Ukrainian forces. While an Abrams can storm through the snow and mud, fuel trucks can't. In addition, like any jet engine, the Abrams' turbine needs air to breathe, which it sucks in through filtered rear vents. When those vent filters get clogged — whether by sand, as soldiers reported to GAO in 1992, or by debris they might encounter in Ukraine — they can't perform. "The Abrams tank is a very complicated piece of equipment. It's expensive, it's hard to train on. ... It is not the easiest system to maintain. It may or may not be the right system," The under secretary of defense for policy, Colin Kahl, told reporters last week at the Pentagon.

The arm-twisting turnabout

Despite all the drawbacks expressed by the U.S., when all was said and done, it came down to political realities and a diplomatic dance.

Germany had been reluctant to send the Leopards, or allow allies to send them, unless the U.S. put its Abrams on the table, due to concerns that supplying the tanks would incur Russia's wrath. The U.S., meanwhile, argued that the German-made Leopards were a better fit because Ukrainian troops could get them and get trained on them far more quickly and easily.

The impasse frustrated European allies, such as Poland, who wanted to send Leopards but couldn't without Germany's OK. Thus began the more fierce negotiations.

U.S. and German officials both used the word "intensive" to describe the talks that ultimately led to the tank turnabout by both countries.

This is the result of intensive consultations, once again, with our allies and international partners," Chancellor Olaf Scholz said in an address to German lawmakers on Wednesday From President Joe Biden on down, calls were made, including to Scholz. Defense Secretary Lloyd Austin and Army Gen. Mark Milley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, spoke and met with their German counterparts and other allies.

Last Friday, the pressure was palpable. Top defense leaders from more than 50 countries met at Ramstein Air Base in Germany to discuss Ukraine's ongoing weapons and equipment needs. Tanks were a key subject. Leaders from countries that have Leopard tanks met with the new German defense minister. Gradually, the German stance began to publicly soften, leading to Wednesday's announcements. Asked repeatedly what changed, Biden administration officials sidestepped. Asked directly about German pressure, Biden told reporters, "Germany didn't force me to change our mind."
